June 9, 2018 - Patent vs Latent Defects in Home Purchases – an update () ?Kü.,[(:w——ô°)

In this program: What are the sellers and buyer’s responsibilities when it comes to disclosing, and investigating problems relating to real estate? For the buyer, the key rule is “buyer beware” meaning it is the buyers’ job to inspect and to satisfy themselves about the condition of the home they are buying. For the Seller their main duty of disclosure is to advise the buyers about latent defects that they know about – latent defects are those that cannot be discovered through a simple inspection - especially those that would render the home uninhabitable or make it dangerous to live there. Iven Tse discusses these rules, and the consequence for not following them, including the consequences for making a ‘reckless misrepresentation'

This affects many immigrant Chinese from Hong Kong, where hyphens and English names appear on one but not the other. Iven Tse discusses the implications, how to legally apply for a name change, and the benefits of consolidating one’s aliases.
